I have had the privilege of coaching Ameer McGee in youth baseball. He is an outstanding ball player but that is easily discernable by watching him play. I would like to speak to Ameer's intangibles. Ameer puts the work in to be better. He attends all practices, hustles, listens to the coaches, and has the desire to be the best. He is a competitor and will give full effort from start to finish in every game. He encourages his teammates and leads by both example and words. He is respectful to his coaches, the other team, and umpires. Ameer's athleticism and skills makes him a good baseball player but his character will make him great both on and off the field.
