To Whom It May Concern,

I am pleased to write to you on behalf of Caden Thornton. I have known Caden for 3 ½ years as his High School Assistant Baseball Coach. He is soft spoken, and leads by example and work ethic. If asked to complete a task, he will do so with enthusiasm and vigor. He is capable of performing well at multiple positions, with a great level of skill and determination, and does so without question. Caden has a great understanding of the commitment and dedication it takes to excel at the task at hand. Caden has set high standards for himself, and is prepared to make the necessary sacrifices to meet these standards.

Caden strives for excellence in everything he takes on. This determination and pride are what have enabled Caden to become the athlete, if not person, that he has become. Caden is well on his way to being successful in anything he puts his mind to.

Leadership comes in many shapes and sizes. On the baseball field, I see a young man who is committed to perfecting his skills. His demeanor quickly inspires confidence in others. He is very “coachable,” and responds well to instruction. Teammates and colleagues depend on Caden to be level headed and thorough in his decision making. As a coach, we depend on him to lead on the field.

Should you have any questions or need further information, please let me know.

Thank you,

Alex Garcia

Assistant Baseball Coach, Los Alamos High School
