Re: Recommendation for Jackson Harms

I am honored to recommend Jackson Harms as a candidate to be a scholar athlete. This year I am Jackson's AP Chemistry teacher and last year he was a student in my honors chemistry class. During this time, I have observed Jackson in the classroom and laboratory settings.

I have found that he is a natural leader that other students look to for guidance both academically and socially. He has served in leadership positions both as a part of his band responsibilities and as a teammate. He has a sense of humor that can and has been apparent in both situations; in science he has matured past mild horseplay in the lab to a more serious collaborative group member; and amongst he and his teammates in class, there seems to be healthy give and take demonstrating both good natured playfulness and respect.

As a student, I have observed that he thinks deeply about the subject and strives to make logical sense of the material based on both new information and his own prior knowledge. He has demonstrated a gift for math and the understanding of the numbers in the application of chemistry. This represents an academic maturity that his classmates mostly have not obtained yet. I fully expect him to succeed in this quite difficult subject as well as in whichever direction he takes his studies after his time in high school.

I offer my whole-hearted recommendation for Jackson and I ask that you give him your full consideration. This is a scholar athlete that will distinguish himself in whatever organization he becomes a member of.

Kind Regards,
