

Walker Still – player testimony from coaches, high school principal and athletic director

Walker's skills speak for themselves on the field, but I feel it is the intangibles that set him apart from other players. He is extremely passionate, fiery, competitive, aggressive and is willing to work to be better than other players. Walker also communicates very well, is a fantastic teammate, strives to be the best he can daily and leads others around him to do the same. I have coached Walker for 4 years and all these attributes are getting stronger every year and he would be the exact player you should be looking for to join your program.

Walker Still is a player you want on your team, plain and simple. His work ethic rivals any player I've coached. He gets better as the moment gets bigger. He really mixes a competitive edge with a nice way of making it look loose, free and easy. And above all else the kid genuinely loves the game.

RE: Character reference for Walker Still.

It is my pleasure to speak about the character and work ethic of Walker Still. Walker is widely liked in our school community because of his super positive and supportive attitude toward others. He is that person or teammate that brings what is needed in the most difficult situations and that you count on in the clutch. Walker is athletic, creative, and dependable. However, it is his sense of humor and compassionate demeanor that makes him a joy to have as a teammate. Please contact me if I can provide any additional information by email at aaron.mckee@corvallis.k12.or.us or by my work phone (541) 766-4851, or cell phone (541) 602-3044.

“Walker is a student-athlete with natural talent who combines that with high level work ethic and dedication to be very successful. When the pressure in the game situation increases his performance rises to the occasion. He has flourished at each level he has played, and I expect that to continue in the future as a result of his talent, work ethic, and mental makeup.”
