

Dear College Baseball Coach,

I have known Ezra Finton for more than 3 years. He and I met when Ezra was just 15 years old and playing for our small local travel club at the time out of North County San Diego. Our club, as well as both of us as men, have grown tremendously. From Day 1 of meeting Ezra, I knew God gave him a natural talent on the field and a tremendous swing. Our job was to take that raw talent and polish him as a ball player.

Ezra is one of the most high quality young men in our now large travel program. He works hard and has enrolled in a weight gaining program I set up for our boys as well. The jump in Ezra filling out his man body tells me he is highly coachable and willing to put the work in without someone holding his hand through every step of the process. When he doesn't know something, he is humble enough to ask a question, but wise enough to try and figure it out on his own first. Ezra has an amazing swing and the type of untamed aggression playing the game that you just cannot teach on the base paths as well as going after balls on defense that are probably not even his, but wants the ball that much. In all my time with Ezra, the only time he has ever missed a practice is for activities related to God, Family, or another team commitment which he gave his word too. He is a loyal kid who will play very hard for you wherever you put him in the field.

My experience with Ezra is highly positive and believe he is a huge win for any program willing to sharpen him as a ball player. He is the type of team player you should feel great about in the dugout as well as community building with the team off the field.

For these reasons, I highly recommend Ezra Finton to go to your school as a collegiate ball player and would provide tremendous value to your program and university.

If you have any questions at all, please feel free to contact me.

All the best,
