

Dear College Baseball Coach,

I hope this letter finds you well. My name is Tyler Green and I was a former pitcher for the Philadelphia Phillies, playing from 1991 to 1999. During my career, I acquired substantial experience in coaching and enhancing pitching techniques for athletes at all levels. My background in sports medicine and bio-mechanics, along with several accomplishments such as the Reds' 2nd pick out of high school, winning a gold medal for the 1988 USA Jr. Olympic team, being a College World Series champion for the Wichita State Shockers in 1989, the Phillies' 1st round draft pick in 1991, a member of the 1993 National League Champion Philadelphia Phillies, and participating in the 1995 All-Star Game during my rookie year, as well as working with thousands of athletes over the last 25 years from MLB veterans to Little League prospects, has allowed me to hone my skills in identifying and nurturing athletes who have the potential to advance to the next level.

It is with this experience and knowledge that I am writing to introduce you to Travis Gates, a talented dual-sport athlete who excels as both a baseball pitcher and football tight end. Travis is a big and strong high school freshman standing at 6'1", 175lbs. He shows impressive raw talent as a right-handed pitcher, with velocities increasing by 6-7 mph in just the past 5 months, even during football season. He throws a heavy fastball in the 82-83 mph range and has a decent slider and a nasty split-finger. Additionally, Travis is a dedicated and coachable student-athlete, maintaining a 4.0 GPA showing he's capable of managing not only his time and schedule but also balancing his workouts and academics. I have had the privilege of working with him for the past year at a facility outside of Phoenix, AZ, and have watched him grow not only as an athlete but also into a mature young adult. I am confident that he would be a great addition to any college baseball team.

I take recommending athletes very seriously, and I am confident that Travis would be worth putting on your radar and following up with over the next couple years. Obviously technology can't detect an athlete's heart, drive, will to win or even that special moment when the right coach ignites something inside them and 'click' their potential turns into performance. That being said, our facility is also equipped with Rapsodo technology, which provides detailed data such as velocities, spin rates, locations, and video, etc., so if you have any questions or would like to know more about Travis, please do not hesitate to contact me at the information below.

Thank you for your time and consideration.

Catch You Later,

-Tyler
