To Whom It May Concern:

My name is Jeremy Bogard. I have been Roman Fina's Spanish teacher for almost 2 years now. During this time, I have come to highly respect Roman for his long list of personal attributes. I am honored to be writing this letter on his behalf.

Roman is not only an incredibly intelligent student who easily acquires new languages, he is also extremely hard working in the classroom. He arrives to class each day prepared to learn and promptly gets to work. Roman puts forth the effort to actually master the curriculum and be able to apply it beyond what is expected of him. Even when a particular activity is optional, Roman is sure to participate to the best of his ability. One of my favorite things about Roman is that he often volunteers to speak in Spanish during class and, in doing so, sets a positive example for his peers.

Another area where Roman stands out from his peers is that he is able to approach adults. When in doubt, Roman has the confidence and maturity to ask questions, thus furthering his growth with the Spanish language. It is evident that he feels comfortable when speaking with his teachers, a characteristic that I wish all students possessed.

To conclude, I am consistently impressed by Roman's ability to conduct himself in a motivated, healthy and mature way. I believe that the skills and attributes I have highlighted will easily transfer to other learning environments and on the baseball field with his future peers and coaches.

Sincerely,

Jeremy Bogard
