

As one of Mark's coaches, I have seen him grow and mature from the very first day. Mark's determination to succeed, both on the field and in the classroom, is what separates him from many of his peers. I ask Mark to practice some drills for five minutes on his own and he comes back the next day telling me he practiced for fifteen minutes. Mark always greets his peers when arriving and says thank you to his coaches after practice. He is always early and never the one to look for a shortcut. Through a dedicated work ethic, this young man was able to make the varsity baseball team as a freshman. Mark is a role model of what hard work and a dedicated commitment to excellence looks like.
