To whom it may concern,

“You’re killing me Smalls!” When I think of Cooper Berta I could picture him as a character in the movie the Sandlot. He could easily be swapped out with Benny the Jet Rodriguez playing baseball with his friends on the diamond. This student lives and breathes the game. He even volunteers his time as a coach for baseball youth or watches his little sister play softball.

I have had the privilege of teaching Cooper in Advanced Algebra with Trig this year. Based on his grades, attendance, and class participation he is a high achiever. He asks great questions in class and is the ultimate team player willing to assist those around him. I admire his persistence that if he did run into a problem he would work it through until he got it correct. It says a lot about his determination. Cooper is the type of student whose character and motivation would make a wonderful addition to your program. Tack on his personality, drive, and talent and you have a very respectful, responsible young individual who packs a lot of potential. I almost wish I could clone more students like Cooper as he’s going to be a memorable one.

As Cooper Berta’s teacher I hold him in the highest esteem and sincerely recommend him for admission. In whatever area he decides to pursue he’s definitely the next Great Bambino, Colossus of Clout, and the Titan of Terror.

Thank you,
